Reflection

My final project has been going very great so far. I have learned some very interesting things while working on the final project. I have learned about the planning process when it comes to creating a website. It was very fun to incorporate many different aspects of that process, including the creative exploration and the wireframes. It was also very fun to incorporate other aspects of the planning process like the usage of fonts, hex codes, and the logo design for each page of the website. That was all of the things that I have learned while working on the final project.

This topic has affected me by having myself become more well-adjusted to the planning process of the final project. The planning process has helped me gained more knowledge on the creation of a website. The many different aspects of the planning process, from the interviews to the creative exploration and wireframes, have been a huge help for me putting together my website. Implementing everything into the website has been a very interesting experience. Replicating the web pages from my desktop and mobile wireframe has also been a very interesting experience. That is how this topic has affected me during this final project.

In the future, I believe that I might add a little bit more content to the website. I was thinking about adding a small easter egg on the website for watchful readers to search for. The easter egg would lead to a secret page with additional content for readers to check out on the website. The additional content in the secret page would include a secret message congratulating the reader for finding the page. The easter egg would act as a reward for people who are reading the content on the website. This would be the first thing for the website that I might do differently in the future.

I also believe that I might go with a different design for the buttons on my website. I imagine myself redesigning the buttons on my website into a pixelated aesthetic. The main reason why I imagine myself redesigning the buttons into a pixelated aesthetic is because I believe that it would fit within the context of the website. The pixelated buttons would fit with the technology theming of the website as well as the prominent use of the Silkscreen font. This would be the second thing for the website that I might do differently in the future.

In conclusion, the progress of my final project has been going very great so far. It was very fun to plan out every aspect of the website. It was also very fun implementing every aspect of the planning process into the website. It was very informative to learn about the important stages of planning out a website. I found the process of planning and creating a website to be rather fun. I was thinking that I might implement some more content for the website in the future. I really hope that I could implement any more ideas into the website.